

THE CHINOOK ADVANCE

Vol. 22

Chinook, Alberta, Thursday June 25 1942

Surprise Miscellaneous Shqwer

A surprise miscellaneous shower was held on Tuesday evening in the Chinook Hotel, sponsored by Miss Florence Barros and Mrs. Jas. Peyton, the guest of honor being Miss Lois Robinson, there were about forty-five present. The evening was spent in playing whist and bingo. The prize winners for whist were Mrs. Nicholson and Mrs. Anderson and Miss Nell Proudfoot for bingo.

The bride elect was presented with a beautifully decorated carriage driven by two small brides namely: Patsy Peyton and Donna Cooley, which was filled with lovely gifts.

A very dainty lunch was served at the close.

OBITUARY

Mr. W. H. Davis

Mr. W. H. Davis, aged 59, of Chinook, Alberta, died suddenly at his home, following a heart attack on June 10th 1942.

Born in Yorkshire, England, he came to Canada in 1904 and settled in the Collholme district, about 6 miles south of Chinook in 1912, where he lived up to the time of his death.

Surviving are his wife; one daughter Margaret; one son Edward; and one brother, Mr. Chris Davis, of Calgary.

It is with deepest regret we have to record the passing of another old resident and pioneer of the Chinook district in person of Mr. W. H. Davis.

Deceased who had just gone out to do his evening chores, was found by his son, Edward, in an unconscious condition; Edward carried him to the house but he passed away without regaining consciousness.

He was weed inspector here for five years.

Mr. Davis served in the British Army in Malta before coming to Canada with his brother Chris. In the early years of the development of this district he took an active interest in school and municipal affairs, as well as in his farming operations. He was a man of sterling character, and the hard life and trying conditions began to tell on his finely moulded temperament.

A few years ago his ardent nature found vent in a small irrigation project. It may be that the hard work in connection with this hastened his end but Bill Davis' Grave and Dam remain a fitting memorial to an earnest hearted pioneer.

Funeral services were con- by Rev. Mr. Barrett. Interment was in Chinook cemetery.

Mrs. E. Jones, of England Mrs. Davis' mother died on May 5th.

GROWN IN SUNNY, SOUTHERN ONTARIO

Dominion Day

AS ANOTHER anniversary of the founding of our Dominion passes into history, Canadians may feel with pride that the hopes and visions of the men who brought about Confederation have been fulfilled. At no time in the seventy-five years since Confederation have world-shaking events been recorded in such quick succession as they have in this year. As a full-fledged nation, beside other freedom loving peoples of the world, Canada has taken her place in the grim struggle to maintain the principles on which our national unity is based. Freedom of speech, freedom of religion, the advancement of learning and the right of everyone to enjoy the privileges of a free citizen, these are the things which Canadians have always known and enjoyed and for which they are fighting to maintain.

The passing of this milestone in the history of our country finds Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen in many parts of the world; in England, in Libya, Malta and Hong Kong. Many of them are guarding our own coasts. On farms and in factories across the country, workers are producing supplies for our armed forces and for those of our Allies. Because of our fortunate geographic position, and the watchful eye of the British Navy, we have so far been spared the horror of having war actually reach our shores. There have been submarines in the St. Lawrence River and some Japanese planes near the coast of Alaska, but as yet only those in our armed forces and their families have felt in any great degree, the real hardship of war.

Must Face The Future

The extra taxes, the rations and shortages of some commodities which we have experienced have affected our lives, but we as yet know nothing of the sacrifice and effort made by the people of England, Russia and China, or the horrors experienced by those living in the occupied countries. Canada has at the moment internal problems. There have been others in the past and there will doubtless be more in the future. Understanding and breadth of outlook by all those living in the Dominion, are essential in solving these problems. As they have risen to face and solve the many difficulties in building up the war effort, so Canadians must face and solve their internal difficulties. As we begin another year of our national life, we in Canada have much for which to be thankful, and many achievements to make us proud, and to give us courage to face the future.

Tried Camouflage

But Dummy Furnaces In Essen Did Not Deceive R.A.F.

German camouflage experts, fearful of raids on Essen, resorted to have built many dummy blast furnaces some distance from Essen's main targets in an effort to deceive enemy raiders.

Joseph W. Grigg, Jr., former United Press manager in Berlin, who arrived in London after five months internment in Germany, said that the "ersatz" targets were built at Essen in the same manner that dummy "Berlins" were constructed.

"The blast furnaces of the Ruhr Valley, including those at Essen, Dortmund and Gelsenkirchen, were visible for miles at night because their flaming smokestacks were perfect beacons for bombers," Grigg said.

"To guard against this the Germans constructed a large number of Dummy blast furnaces, belching smoke and flames at night like the real ones in an attempt to deceive the R.A.F. bombers."

Money From Salvage

Nova Scotia Fishermen Were Paid Nice Sum For Work

Goods salvaged from a merchant ship which ran aground off Nova Scotia netted fishermen $25,000, H. N. M. Stanbury, provincial salvage organizer, said. Tons of lard, in cases, barrels and floating free on the surface like miniature ice floes, were garnered by the fishermen, in addition to tires and war supplies of many kinds. One fisherman alone, it was reported, received $1,549 in salvage tolls for his few weeks' work.

The Individual Citizen's Army

A Weekly Column About This And That In The Canadian Army.
By Alan Maurice Irwin

National unity is a term that has been loosely, often much too loosely, interpreted to mean the interrelation of English and French speaking Canadians. So generally accepted has this interpretation become that most of us seem to have forgotten that national unity is non-existent so long as the tribulations of Canadians in any of the provinces are not shared by Canadians in the other provinces.

What prompts this sermonizing is the recent flurry over the reduction of the gasoline rationing unit in the Maritime Provinces from five gallons to two due to a shortage which by the time this reaches print may have disappeared. There was a perfectly natural feeling down east that it was not fair that Maritimers should be on "short commons" when drivers in the other six provinces still could obtain their full ration.

Ottawa answered by pointing out reasons that fully justified the reduction.

All of this is a preamble to the charge that we are failing to live up to our privilege of serving in the ranks of the Individual Citizen's Army.

How? It should be obvious!

Have we in the central and western parts of the country any moral right to five gallons of gasoline when because of transportation or any other difficulties, fellow privates in our behind the lines army—who are much closer to actual warfare and potential attack—have to be reduced to two gallons.

Why, if there is true national unity, do we not spare the public embarrassment of Ministers who employ to govern us by voluntarily reducing our consumption of gasoline to the lowest level forced upon any geographical section of the Dominion?

Citizens of countries where "ver-botten" is a familiar word read garbled accounts of our provincial differences, accounts that are magnified to the point of making some of us appear to be "oppressed minorities," when such stories are published. But the fact that such stories are published is the fault of the citizen who fail to give the lead to those they have set in authority.

We cheerfully and voluntarily ration ourselves in the use of tea, coffee, and sugar. Why not ration ourselves in the use of gasoline? If we can drink our fewer cups of tea and coffee unsweetened why can't we walk a mile or two and save the gasoline we would have used for war uses?

Across this country from coast to coast business experts are devoting their talents to the working out of a system of price and supply control that will spare us the horrors of inflation and maintain stocks of essential war goods for our fighting forces. Some of these men serve without pay, the others—away from their normal occupations—sacrifice the normal advancements and promotions they could expect if they stayed in their own jobs.

These men don't enjoy restricting and controlling their neighbours—it takes a Nazi mentality to enjoy that sort of thing—and they welcome action on the part of Canadians that makes their work easier.

Why can't we then, who are all out to win the war in the best way we can, make rationing and control unnecessary. Surely we can stint ourselves for the common good!

The soldier who leaves a $150 a month job to volunteer to serve in uniform for (in the case of a single man) a little more than half of that amount has voluntarily rationed himself much more severely than we have been called upon.

Sugar, tea, coffee, gasoline and tires, as this is written, are the only rationed commodities. It's funny how some of them lie in with each other. The use of less sugar reduces the "spare tires" some of us carry around. The use of less gasoline increases the life of "spare tires" we cannot replace.

Have you joined the Reserve Army yet? Encouraging signs are visible in some parts of the country since this workable body was set up to give those ineligible for active service overseas a chance to train themselves for home defence but I have not heard any commanding officer say yet that he can't handle any more recruits.

That's another branch of the Individual Citizen's Army!

There are no "national" holidays in the United States. Each state has jurisdiction over the holidays to be observed.

Conditions On Jap Ships

Living Quarters So Crowded Disease Is Prevented Among Troops
The Communist newspaper New China Daily News published an article said to have been written by a Japanese prisoner of war declaring that "poor nutrition and sleeping quarters more than counter-balance the heavier guns and higher speed of Japanese warships."

"Most Japanese sailors are crowded on lower decks," the article said. "Japanese naval officers scoff at American and British warships as tourist boats, but the Japanese seamen have no love for their own slave runners."

For example, more than 1,000 out of 1,500 members of the crew of the Japanese battleship Hyuga (completed in 1918) were housed on lower decks in bunks which take up even the passages. The sailors sleep rubbing shoulders with each other. The foul air causes a number of diseases, mostly pleurisy and weak lungs."

A number of collisions, groundings and explosions aboard Japanese warships resulted from decreased efficiency caused by the poor living conditions, the article stated. It said known instances included a collision of the Hyuga and a submarine off Western Japan and an explosion aboard a cruiser of the Myoka class. The Japanese navy has a dread of air attacks, the article added, because most of the deck armor has been sacrificed for more guns and higher speed.

LOAD IS LIGHTER

The Canadian army is reducing the load carried by foot-slogging infantrymen carried maximum of only 40 pounds, including clothes, weapons and kit. It speeded up movement. In the first great war, old soldiers say, infantry lugged upwards of 90 pounds.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Tamar knew that as long as she lived she would never forget her experience in the cabin at the foot of the mountains. After a meal of fried potatoes, corn bread and slabs of canned meat, which Louis had prepared, she washed the dishes. Louis sat by the fireplace and watched her.

Tamar had eaten slowly, a little of this and a little of that, but kept up her strength. Her hands trembled and she dropped the heavy coffee cup and broke it, the brown liquid spreading on the wide flooring.

"Nervous, eh? I'm surprised that you society dames don't know how to handle any situation with calmness and poise. Now, you take Thesee—she'd be perfectly at home—give her this place or your own drawing room."

Tamar knew that he was rested, and pleased with his great idea and the success with which he so far had in carrying it out. She had haltingly written the note to her father, "I am safe and unharmed. The place I am in is comfortable." Louis had quoted the words to her and she tried wildly to think of something to put into it to make her father know that she was unafraid.

"Make yourself comfortable, Miss Randolph," Louis said, mockingly gracious. "There's magazines and cigarettes in the guest room. Help yourself."

Tamar went directly into the bedroom and closed the door. There was the key in the lock and she turned it.

Louise laughed. "That would certainly burn Thesee up! She'll probably claw your pretty white throat. I'll tell her that you thought your charms were irresistible."

Tamar's fingers gripped together across her lips to keep her from crying. Her face turned a deep crimson and she looked wildly at the only opening in the room, a small window. She could see that it was tightly shuttered and that it was hopelessly impossible to consider escape through it.

Even if she could get out of the cabin, where could she go? She knew that the cold night air and the wilderness of the countryside were as formidable as Louis himself. The lamp that Louis had provided for her with was turned low on a table beside the rude bed. The chimney was smoked and had the appearance of neglect. The room was cold and she longed for Louis's Thesee.

"You'll find some night clothes in the dresser. Help yourself."

T'll not touch a thing! Tamar thought with disgust. This jacket she had put on only at his insistence, and it had looked clean and new. She looked at the bed. It seemed comfortable. Were the coverings and sheets clean? She hesitantly investigated, turning back the heavy spread.

"Clean sheets and covers are on the shelves," Louis's voice caused her to jump. She had a feeling that he could see every move that she made. Underneath the spread the mattress was bare. It had been stripped of everything. Again, Tamar had the impression that the place was cared for. As though the linens had been taken away to be laundered. She decided to make the best of the situation and walked over to a cupboard. Opening it, she found a pile of clean sheets, pillow cases, towels and heavy wool blankets of pastel colors. The feminine influence, she thought. The whole was still on some, proving they had never been used and she withdrew two of them.

"Get out some stuff for me, Sis. I'll take the living-room couch, thank you."

Tamar's figure grew taut. So she would have to open her door once more? The feeling of safety which had slipped over her as she turned the key a moment before now disappeared.

"Hurry up in there. I'm tired. I've got a big day ahead of me. And you can lock the door if you like. The shutter's nailed down and I'm pulling the couch across your door, so you can't get out. Of course, I think you'll be sensible, though, and not think of going into the wilderness outside. You couldn't get away, even if it was day."

Tamar pulled down some more linens and covers. She could hear him removing his boots and heard them drop to the floor. "We'll get some sleep tonight. Hand me those things."

He grinned at her as she thrust them through the opening in the doorway. She closed the door and locked it once more. What would tomorrow bring to her? She wondered. She opened the chest and looked for pajamas.

Thesee has fairly good taste, she thought. A pile of lingerie greeted her eyes. Satin gowns and pajamas in tawny and blues, jersey lounge pajamas, ballgowns and light-weight corduroy. All new.

Tamar chose the warmest looking of them all. She stripped off her slacks and green sweater, and in another moment was looking in the glass at her reflection.

Then she felt like laughing wildly. She was still sane enough to care how she looked. She should be down on her knees giving thanks for this Thesee, who was influential enough to manage Louis's actions by some kind of remote control.

It seemed hours before Tamar could stop shaking and really feel warm and relaxed. She drifted off into a fitful nap about daybreak, only to awaken and toss again. She could hear Louis's heavy snoring in the next room, and having heard him pull the studio couch in front of her door, knew she could not hope to get out.

The intense cold had sharpened during the night and she pulled the blankets up over her head. In her next few minutes' slumber, she raced about the meadows of Shadwell on Madcap, with Ranny before her galloping Tablanka II. They quarreled over who had won the race, and Phoebe settled it with their own gingerbread.

She could see a light under the crack in the door and knew he had lit the lamp. "Ho hum! Time to get up. How'd you sleep, Princess?"

She could hear him moving about. Heard the snapping of kindlings in the fireplace. "I'll make us a little coffee, Milady. Hope you're more sociable today."

Tamar remained silent. So Louis wanted to be sociable? And he was feeling very good this morning over the prospect of the day. How would he get the note to her father? And how could he bring Thesee here without leaving her alone?

Tamar thought wildly about Shadwell. Her dream had been so vivid, and her remembering tears of her mother had dried at Louis's ridiculous attempt to banter. What would Ranny be doing about her? She knew that he would never stop searching. Dear Ranny. She loved him so. She wished achingly for a sight of him and her father and mother again together on the terrace at home.

Fleeting days that pass so rapidly that we don't take time to appreciate them, she thought. A year ago I worried about money, but I had a wealth in love and association that was too good to last.

"Shall I fix your tray, Princess, or would you care to come out like just folks and eat with me?" Louis called as he walked toward the kitchen.

Louise did not answer.

"Oh, well, you can cook your own breakfast! I'll make us some coffee, but you gotta fry your own eggs."

She could smell the tantalizing odor of bacon and coffee presently. "Get up, Princess. Hurry up, or I'll come in and pull you out of your downy couch. I've got work to do today."

Tamar slid out of the bed and dressed with numb fingers. She heard the couch being slipped away from the door and the sharp voice of Louis: "I've left you some grub. No more foolin', come on now."

She turned the key and opened the door. The big room was lit from the burning logs, and she thought reluctantly, it looked cozy. "I'll bring your plate in here for you. You can wash up there in the kitchen."

To be in such a dangerous situation. It was ridiculous to feel as safe as she did. Tamar came back to the fire and sat down on a low stool. "I knew I've never entertained as beautiful a lady in my life," Louis said admiringly.

Tamar blushed. She was lovely there in the firelight, her hair curling about her white face, but her eyes were deep with fright and worry. She was thinner than she had been for years.

"However," Louis went on placidly, "I like 'em plumper."

Tamar ate the bacon and egg and drank her coffee black. "Thanks," she said, "and now, please listen. If you'll get me back to civilization, I'll forget everything about this little adventure. You've still got a chance to call quits."

Louise jumped up in amazement. "You take fool! Just because I've been decent to you, don't think I'm not meaning business!"

Tamar said quietly, "I warn you, if a certain man ever gets his hands on you it will be just too bad."

Louise threw back his head and laughed uproariously.

Trip To The Moon

Could Be Made In 45 Hours According To Plans

The British Interplanetary Society recently revealed that it had drawn up plans for a 1,512-ton rocket-driven space ship which, it claimed, could make the 238,800 miles to the moon in about 45 hours on 1,150 tons of solid fuel.

Passengers in pressure suits equipped with air-regeneration apparatus would be landed on the moon from airlocks on each side of the craft. On the return trip the apparatus would use a giant parachute as an air brake after it entered the earth's atmosphere.

Newswatch.

Every Three Seconds

Army Greatcoat Is Completed In Factory At Leeds

Army greatcoats use up 40 miles of cloth and lining a week in a single Leeds factory where one garment is completed every three seconds. This week's and another which has turned out 320,000 battledresses a week are using every week enough cotton to go three times around the equator. These are only two of the 250 tailoring firms who were given the largest single clothing order ever placed for 5,000,000 battledresses and 6,000,000 trousers. That meant 9,000 miles of cloth, absorbing 10,000 tons of wool; 9,000 miles of lining, and 200,000,000 brass buttons.

A week later, 1,150,000 army greatcoats were ordered, calling for 7,000,000 yards of the heavy milled waterproof cloth, specially produced for the purpose by the Yorkshire mills, who blend six different colors of wool to make the perfect khaki. In six months the overcoats produced from Yorkshire cloth would have provided 25 years' supply in normal times.

Cereal Substance

Claimed Superior To Alcohol For Making Synthetic Rubber

Investigations are being conducted by the National Research Council into the production of a substance from cereals which may prove superior to alcohol in the manufacture of butadiene, an important element in manufacture of synthetic rubber, it was revealed in a return tabled in Commons.

The return was made for Dr. G. Fauteux (Lib., Montreal-St. Mary), who asked whether scientific investigations have been carried on as to the possibility of using Canadian-grown cereals to produce butadiene. Alcohol, which can be converted to butadiene, can be produced from cereals by recognized fermentation methods, the return said, but investigation now is being conducted along other lines.

Jimmy—"The kind you can't whistle, sir."

He—Last night I dreamed I married the most beautiful woman in the world.

She—Where we happy?

Professor—What happens when the human body is immersed in water?

Co-ed—The telephone rings.

Small Girl (to 7-year-old friend)—Oh I think you're lots better looking than your daddy.

Boy (true child of the motor era)—Well, I oughta be—I'm a later model.

Beginner—What's the matter with my game?

Golf Pro—Well, first you'll have to unlearn all you know about the game. I'll take only a minute.

Humorous Man (in street car)—Has anyone dropped a wad of notes with an elastic band round them?

Chorus of Voices—Yes! I have! Well, I've just picked up the elastic band."

"We now have the Parent-Teacher Association."

"When we were kids we didn't have to face any such odds as these."

First Girl—What a perfectly exquisite hat, dear.

Second Girl—I am glad you like it. First Girl—I am perfectly lovely. I used to wear a hat like that myself when it was in the fashion.

Landlord—I've called to say that I'm going to raise the rent owing to the increasing cost of living, Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Smith—I'm glad to hear it, for I was just coming to tell you that I can't raise it myself.

Staffed By Women

More Girl Employees In Canadian Banks Than Ever Before

In probably no industry or business have women taken the place of men in such numbers as in Canadian banks. "Women represent 50 per cent. of our staffs and the number is still increasing," is the report from most banks. More and more women replacements are expected. There isn't a "youngster" left, that is, a single male between 18 and 26 or so, in any of the country's banks, unless he's been classed as physically unfit by military authorities. Right now there are more girl employees in banks than ever before. It doesn't take much calculating to see that when things get back to normal, and men take over their old jobs, that there are going to be a lot of girls who'll know all about how books are balanced. An official of the Royal Bank gave out these figures: "We started the war with 1,250 men and 300 women in our Ontario branches. At the end of April, this year, we had 850 men, and something like 833 women. Many of the girls are tellers, and some are acting as assistant accountants."

The importance of this cannot be over-emphasized, but to destroy flies before they get in their deadly work is, obviously, the safest solution, as it eliminates the extraordinary prolific breeding capacity of the common house fly. In this connection, it is very generally conceded that Wilson's Fly Pads offer a rapid, safe, sure and cleanly method of killing all the flies. Just a few pads in the right place, at the right time, will do the trick. In war days, the keeping up of a nation's morale is greatly aided by protecting health and anything that helps to exterminate flies, helps to do this.

Incidentally, Wilson's Fly Pads work wonders in destroying ants, too, which are destructive, annoying pests, indoors and outdoors.

If only 30 Calgarians decided to buy new automobiles, all Calgary's "open sale stock" would be wiped out, it was stated by city car dealers.

While there are approximately 150 new cars in storage in Calgary only 30 are available for sale to the general public under regulations.

The remainder are "frozen" by the Dominion transit controller and may only be sold to police, fire, medical and similar preferred classes on requisition from Ottawa.

To obtain cars from this "frozen" stock, a person must show that it is essential for him to have a new car and his present car must be "condemned".

The "open sale stock" of 30 cars, it is said, will constitute the total supply of new cars there available for sale to the general public, without restriction, for the duration.

Members of the armed forces may hunt game without fee or ordinary license during the open seasons, as a result of an order-in-council passed by the provincial government last week. On producing a letter or certificate from the officer commanding a unit applicants will be given a special license without charge by the game branch of the department of lands and mines.

Following government appeals for early stocking of coal supplies to obviate a famine next winter, Edmonton coal dealers report that a good percentage of customers are buying their supplies now. It is anticipated that when city backyard gardens are cleared of crops about the end of summer the rush of orders will be much greater. Meantime, warnings are repeated; buy winter coal now to avoid famine later.

The Ladies Card Club Met Tuesday evening

The ladies' Card Club met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. Gallagher. The honors were shared by Mrs. Gallagher and Mrs. Lee.

This will be the final meeting as the Club will discontinue holding their meetings during the summer months.

WARNING!

If it is not already on its way to Rationing Headquarters you should

MAIL YOUR APPLICATION CARD FOR COUPON RATIONING AT ONCE!

After July 1st no one will be able to purchase sugar for regular domestic use without turning in a ration coupon.

Application cards for coupon rationing for sugar have now been mailed to every household in Canada. But, in an undertaking so vast, some homes may have been missed, or some cards may have gone astray. So, no matter where you live, whether it is in areas served by letter carrier or not, if your application card is not already on its way to Rationing Headquarters, you should wait no longer.

After filling in the card, according to the instructions on the pamphlet which was delivered with it, just drop the card in the nearest mail box or post office. It needs no forwarding address.

IF YOU HAVE NOT RECEIVED AN APPLICATION CARD you should get one at the nearest Post Office at once.

All Post Offices have received full instructions to rush application cards for coupon rationing to the nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board Office, where they will get immediate attention and the coupon ration cards mailed right back to you.

The ration cards being issued for use July 1st are for sugar only, and good for 10 weeks. At the end of that period a coupon ration book good for 6 months will be issued. Under the new system of coupon rationing, you are allowed the same amount of sugar as at present— $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. per person per week. The same provision as at present for additional quantities for preserving and jam and jelly making will be continued. Special voucher forms for this purpose are being supplied all retailers.
